Reasons African Americans Resist Substance Use Disorders Treatment

- Historical mistreatment/maltreatment leading to mistrust of institutions
- High rates of mandated treatment (the criminalization of addiction)
- Harmed in previous counseling relationships
- Misdiagnosis and overdiagnosis

• Not feeling welcomed and discomfort with the counselor

• The counseling approach does not match problem solving approaches within the client’s culture

• Substance use may be viewed as a coping mechanism and solution to life’s challenges

• Historical knowledge of the consequences of talking and sharing your truth
The Historical Price

• That African Americans have paid for talking and sharing their truth

Summary

If you speak your truth you can:

- Get assassinated
- Exiled
- Fired
- Labeled communist or un-American
Engaging African American Clients With Substance Use Disorders Within the First 10 Minutes of Contact

Creating a welcoming environment

• Voice tone matters

• Lessons from doctors offices – increased first session attendance by 30%

• The greeting matters

• What do the pictures on the wall say?
Engaging African American Clients Continued

- An inviting waiting room
- What do the magazines say?
- The length of the wait matters
- Provide positive service energy
What African Americans Seeking Recovery Need From Helpers

Helpers who are able to discuss intersectionality and micro-aggressions. This can be particularly helpful in the cross cultural counseling relationship with African American clients.

Intersectionality includes the ways in which the life of the counselor and African American client are similar and different.
Types of Micro-aggressions Experienced by African Americans

• Assumptions of:
  • intellectual inferiority
  • second class citizenship
  • lack of patriotism
  • violent tendencies
  • criminality
  • inferiority
  • homogeneity of experiences, beliefs and interpretations
Examples of Microaggressions

- I know you’ll be late for the next session.
- Do you play basketball?
- You speak good English.
- We’re having fried chicken for lunch next week at the agency.
What African Americans Need From Helpers Continued

Helpers who understand his or her own diverse identities, examine their own ism’s, strives to practice cultural humility, and is in touch with their own history of trauma. If the helper does not do this work no training in EMDR, DBT, prolonged exposure therapy will allow them to do their best work with African Americans seeking recovery.

Helpers that Focus on Strengths

- What do you do well?
- How have you been able to endure so much?
- What do you like to do in your leisure time?
- What is the best thing you ever made happen?
- What are the best 3 moments you can recall in your life?
- What have you learned from what you’ve gone through?

- Helpers that establish an egalitarian relationship
- Helpers that make sure the client has a voice in the treatment plan
- A willingness to have a sensitive discussion of race and other differences
- Transparency and authenticity
- An openness to multiple pathways of recovery
